"LATVIA IS ONE OF THE GREENEST COUNTRIES IN THE WORLD"

Yale and Columbia universities research of "Environmental Performance Index" (EPI) research

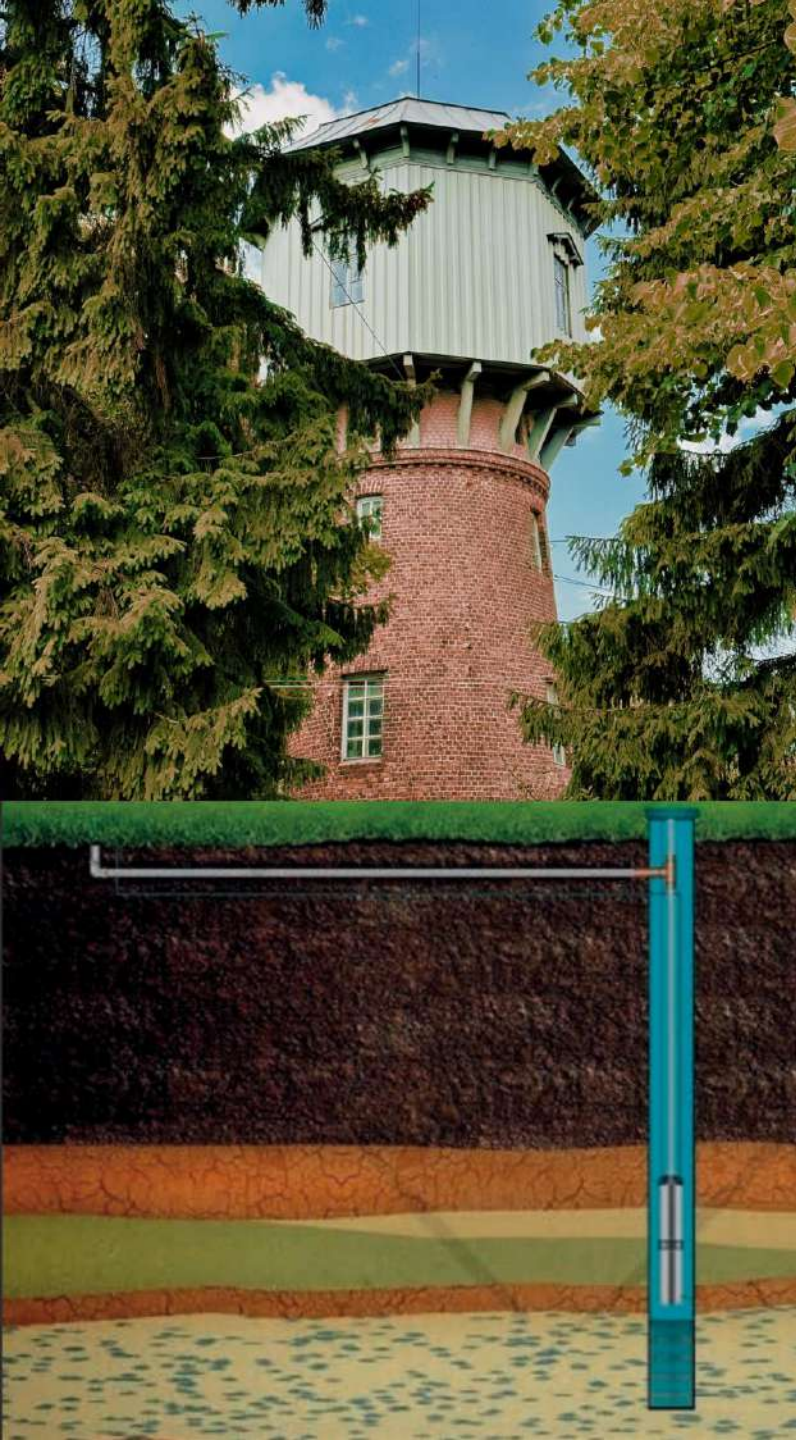

Ask any distiller about what makes their spirit stand out, they'll first point to the base material and its origin, and then the water supply. When assessing the most environment-friendly country in the world, Latvia is in the top 3. The forests, peat bogs and mires work like a giant filter to absorb carbon dioxide from the atmosphere and convert it to healthy biomass. While other, more industrialized countries pump carbon dioxide into the air, Latvia's forests reverse the damage through a natural process called "CO₂ sequestration". Latvia has the lowest per capita carbon dioxide emissions of any country in the European Union.
